Buying a brand new cell phone is exciting, and it's a time that many "gadget geeks" look forward to. But did you know that many people wind up making a big mistake because they failed to compare cellular phones before making a purchase? If you're the spontaneous type who typically makes spur of the moment purchases, this article will give you some points to consider before buying your next mobile phone.

So why is it so important to compare mobile phones first, before buying one? In a nutshell, there are 3 reasons:

1. Price
2. Reliability
3. Features

The first reason why you need to compare cell phones is price. Walk into a retail store to buy a phone, and you'll probably end up getting gouged. Many times, mobile phones can be found much cheaper or on sale through other outlets. You'll cost yourself a lot of unnecessary money if you don't price shop.

The second reason is handset reliability. Some cell phone manufacturers have a reputation for producing high-quality, durable cell phones that last for years. Others make junk that seems to always need repaired. It's vital that you read cell phone reviews and reliability ratings prior to buying that shiny new handset.

Lastly, you need to compare the features offered by different mobile phone models. With video, music, games, and more, cell phones in today's day and age are cooler than ever. Make sure that you spend some time reviewing features and determine what you want/need before buying. This will guarantee that you end up with a phone that you'll love.

Hopefully this brief article has given you some good reasons why you should compare cellular phones before making a purchase. A cell phone is something that you carry with you and use every single day, isn't it important that you make the right decision?
