In the fast growing world, mobile technology is a developing force towards modernization. Cell phones have come down from their status of luxury by proving its necessities in your daily life. If you are planning to buy a new cell phone, it is important to evaluate the features that are essential for you.

Signal Range

The strength of cell phones depends upon the varying signal ranges they can function on. The considerable report from people reveals that Motorola and Nokia phones are highly reliable for signals while Audiovox phones go out of range in the borderline areas.

Media Choice

You have different kinds of media features including camera and video camera capabilities in your phone. There are more intricate choices such as larger displays and colour monitors to be considered. Select the quality you need. Decide on the video file format-many phones use a Quick time format that is harder to edit than other formats.

Game Choice

You want to play games on your mobile phone? Some phones come with advanced games and most Nokia phones come with a very few basic games. Almost in all the phone models, you have the convenience of adding your games later.

Messaging

Most of the cell phones come with the basic messaging capabilities. If you want advanced features including multimedia messaging capabilities, make sure the phone you have planned to purchase has the features you need.

Design

Cell phones have a good number of design options such as flip phones, slim line, standard and much more. It is essential to choose a convenient phone with an internal antenna. You have wide choices with different button styles and arrangements. The choice of your cell phone design depends upon your personal preference.

Other Features

There are many useful extras in a cell phone such as: a calculator, a notes program, alarm clock, a timer, translation features, a sound recorder, a digital calendar/ planner, AM/FM radio capabilities, a to-do list program, a stopwatch and others. If you need any of these helpful features, remember them when selecting your phone.
