Article Body:

Photo restoration is the practice of restoring a photograph which has been spoiled or exaggerated by age.

Photo restoration may be effective in removing or masking the following defects:

- 1.Staining (such as yellowing) of the photographic document due to age and chemical reactions
- 2.Dust and hair observable on the photograph
- 3.Spots caused by bacteria or mold
- 4.Scratches or tears on the print
- 5.Discoloration of the publish due to fading

Playing around with the brightness and contrast controls will give a better restoration of photos. A lot of old photos are too contrast(y). Others are badly faded and can help from being darkened a little, or adding a bit of distinction. Really damaged photos that have a bad wrinkle or tear across the face can be moderately tricky, but if you are a bit creative, you can typically recover the image quite a bit.

1. Protect what's left
2. Get it restored
3. Get two copies to avoid repetition of restoration process.
4. Share/Store the photos online
