Enjoying coffee is only the final step of a long process of brewing and selecting perfect raw materials and machines. It has long been a tradition that people get a hint of that kick that caffeine brings to drinking coffee.

Freshness of the Drink

A cup of coffee should be enjoyed fresh and if possible it should be as fresh as the day it was grounded. Traditional coffee making involving beans roasted and grounded at home to have that fresh flavor can sometimes turn into a disaster. Coffee beans should never be roasted too long as it can lose its natural flavor and can bring out a burnt flavor instead. When grinding coffee beans, it should be just right so as not to lose the coffee beans essential oils that bring out the rich flavor and aroma.

K Cup Coffee is packed in single serving containers that go with certain coffee maker machines. The container is carefully engineered to seal in its freshness and flavor. This container also keeps out oxygen, mildew, moisture and light and keeps essential oils inside. The only time that the coffee is exposed to the air is when the spray punctures the foil that is covering the single serve drink and hot water is sprayed inside. After combining the cup with hot water, this can give you a coffee that is fresh in aroma and flavor as if it were right out of the farm.
