Okay so there are numerous ways to find calling cards these days. The most conventional and probably easiest way to find then is to go to your local grocery or drug store and simply ask for one. A lot of gas stations also carry them; they are not hard to find. However if you are really worried about getting the best rate and finding the right card, I have good news. There now appear to be actual calling card distributors available on the internet.

Of course I found these calling card distributors in the internet. Isn't that how you find everything nowadays; on the internet? Well so most of the pages I found act kind of as a search engines for the calling cards they stock; it is kind of like an eBay for calling cards. You can type in the country you are calling from and the country you are calling to and they will give you a huge list of all the possible calling cards out there and their rates-. The one search I did turned up with 20 results. Now some of these cards I am sure are hard to find in your grocery stores of drug stores; and most stores only sell one or two kinds of cards. However; you can actually order these cards online. These sites act like online calling card distributors for people who need them.

I can't say why I am surprised at this service. You can find most things on the internet now. It just seems like such a small industry and not one that people would develop entire internet sites and businesses around. However I guess you can now make a business out of anything if you want to, and now should you really need an international calling card, and are really worried about the rates; well here is your solution.
