It's barbecue season! Time to get outdoors, invite family and friends and have a celebration. But, if you have ever hosted an outdoor event, you know how much work it can be.

It's your gathering and you need everything to be just right. There are so many considerations and so much to do. Planning, finding a date, organizing; not to mention everything that needs to be done on the day of the event. Many people simply don't host because it is too much work.

An outdoor event catering company can help with all of these details and do so much more to turn your barbecue into a more enjoyable occasion, for you and your guests.

Starting with the planning, a catering company will help by presenting options and ideas for making your barbecue extra special.

Of course, the menu is very important. Not only does it need to be tasty and well-prepared, but, your health-conscious guests want healthy hors d'oeuvres and main courses - done barbecue style. Look for a catering company with a specific barbecue or outdoor menu. Many indoor specialties simply don't work as well out-of-doors.

But, it's more than good food. You need great service. Your catering company should be ready to prepare and serve food outdoors. The serving staff needs to be courteous, professional and able to make your guests feel comfortable.

Make sure the barbecue catering company you choose will take care of everything you need for an outdoor event, from place settings to tents. You should not need to worry about set-up and clean-up either.

The barbecue catering specialists at Ida's Kitchen are ready to take care of everything you need for a successful outdoor event.
