So, you've decided that you definitely want brand name watch and you've done the research, you know the differences between a brand name watch and a replica, but you still haven't figured out what name brand you want to purchase. With a little name brand watching, you'll have it figured out in no time at all.

Where to start your name brand watch search

The best place to start is consumer reports. Read what other people think about the make and model of the brand name watch that you're interested in. Know what each brand offers. Know how the quality of the different brands measure up to one another. This is a lot like researching the make and model of a new car.

Each company has their rendition of the sedan, but the Infinity and the Jaquer are a lot nicer looking than say, the Camry, but what about quality? Which one is made better? This is something that you need to research while you're "name brand watching". It's also vital to look at what else the company has made, and how long the company has been around.

Sometimes new companies evolve, and put out a great product for a minimal cost, just because they are trying to break into the market. Don't over look those guys! Read ratings, other peoples opinions, ask around! You may find that you're getting twice the quality for half the cost.

But buyer beware, sometimes, unfortunately, you do get what you pay for, so don't make a hasty decision with your fingers crossed and expect to come out on top. Look for something reliable. A brand name watch is an investment

Also check into a warranty just in case something does go wrong. This is another great thing to look into during your "name brand watching". Some companies offer a better warranty system than the others. And with an investment like this, you want to be protected.

These are just a few ways to get your feet off the ground and do a thorough study to learn and watch different name brands.
